War And Christianity

The question of the effect of war on the Christian religion is engrossing the minds of many and to forestall disastrous results in that particular the entire United States is swarming with evangelists and the regular ministers are doubling their preaching and prayermeeting exercises as well as adding every conceivable adjunct to these rallying efforts.

The fact that orthodox protestants and catholics are exterminating each other on the field of battle; protestants invoking and receiving the assistance of pagans to butcher and mangle the members of their churches; ministers exhorting their congregations and profanes to shoulder guns and sabers and sail in and massacre alleged enemies, not of the church but civil government; alliances formed which heretofore have been grossly repugnant, not alone personally but religiously, combine to instill into the minds of all who pause to reflect, the consciousness of waning faith and the inefficacy of Grace.

Not now do we hear from the pulpit thunderings against catholicism and anathemas on the Pope; no doctrinal differences appear to exist between denominations in any land; sectarian enemies no longer exhibit sympathy for each others alleged fatal misconception of the straight and narrow path but urge each other into the broadened road to war against each other for world supremacy in a foreign land in some or many particulars, just what has not been clearly or conclusively conveyed to the general mind.

If at the close of hostilities there shall be a solid union of all those who profess faith in the same Saviour; if there shall be left only one church in which to worship the one God of all and the apostles of the Redeemer concerned more with saving souls than securing salaries and scattering political dissension, then perhaps the sacrifice of life which shall have taken place during the boasted age of the highest civilization will establish beyond peradventure that "with out the shedding of blood there is no remission."

Gasoline From Natural Gas

Statistics just completed under the supervision of John D. Northrop, of the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, show that the year 1916 was one of marked expansion in the natural-gas gasoline including that produced by the compression and absorption methods as well as that obtained by the use of vacuum pumps and recovered as drips from gas-transmission lines, and sold in that year was 104,212,809 gallons, a gain of 38,848,144 gallons, or 59 percent over the output in 1915. The quantity of commercial gasoline presented by this output of raw casing-head product, tho not susceptible of actual determination was probably more than 200,000,000 gallons.

The average price received in 1916 for the unblended product at the sources of production was 14 cents a gallon and the market value of the entire output was $14,408,201, a gain of 6 cents in average unit price and of $9,257,378, or 180 percent in total value compared with 1915.

The volume of natural gas from which this quantity of gasoline was recovered is estimated at more than 208,800,000 cubic feet, the average recovery of gasoline per thousand cubic feet by all methods being about half a gallon.

The number of plants for extracting gasoline from natural gas increased from 414 at the beginning of 1916 to 504 at the end of the year, a gain of 43 percent, whereas the combined daily capacity of all plants increased from 232,336 to 484,548 gallons, or about 108 percent.

A table shows the sources of casing-head gasoline produced in the United States in 1916.

Summer Complaint

During the hot weather of the summer months some member of almost every family is liable to be troubled with the unnatural looseness of the bowels, and and it is the greatest importance that this be treated promptly, which can only be done when the medicine is kept at hand. Mrs. F. F. Scott, Scottsville, N. Y., states, "I first used Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy as much as five years ago. At that time I had a severe attack of summer complaint and was suffering intense pain. One dose relieved me. Other members of my family have used it with like results."

I know I have the cheapest money in Chariton county for 5, 7 or 10 years. Come in and let me figure with you. Office over Farmers Bank.
